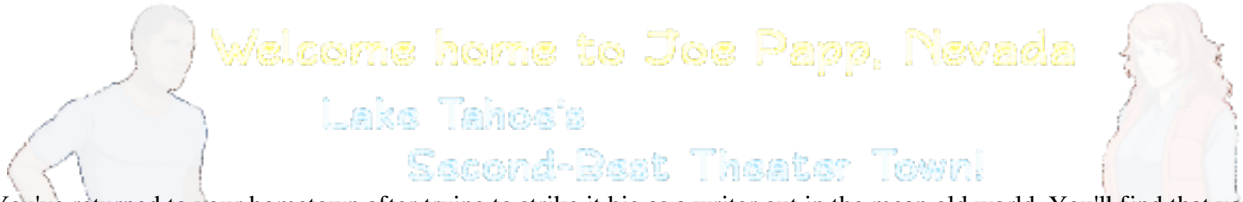
About This Game



You've returned to your hometown after trying to strike it big as a writer out in the mean old world. You'll find that your old theater festival, the John Q. Public Festival, has fallen upon hard times (but honestly, when has it not?). It's not easy being Lake Tahoe's second-best Shakespeare festival. It falls to you to write a new future for the festival, as well as either mend or break your relations with the people that you left behind.

Or at least that's the story you're trying to tell.

As a writer, you find yourself with the ability to change the story that you are in, making choices between multiple characters that ultimately dictate how the story progresses. Will you save the theater festival, or will you cause the zombie apocalypse?

- Write new paths to go down with every new scene
- Your choices have effects on how every character views you
- Make decisions that will affect your play's rating with the critics

At the end of the day, I was making toilet jokes and innuendos. You wanna make me explain, in bullet points, the meaning behind 'a horse, a horse, my kingdom for a horse'? We really wanna go over that old chesnut?
